Note The Tools panel is located directly above the Layers panel. It contains a variety of tools that can help you edit your layers and frames. The Tools panel is described in detail on Frontiers and Techniques. Figure 1-2. The Layers panel enables you to manage your layers so you can position them and control how they affect the appearance of an image. Photoshop also gives you a preview of the image, showing you what it will look like after all the layers are added to the image. * Layer panel. The Layers panel, which appears below the Tools panel, enables you to control and reorder your layers. You can use the Select tool to select the layers (see Figure 1-2, below the top-left corner of the Layers panel.) You can see the top most layer by clicking it. Click the layer name to make it active. Use the Move tool to move a layer out of position. Photoshop provides several Quick Selection tools for layer selection, and also enables you to use a Layer Mask. You can use the Create a Layer Mask tool to create a mask that identifies a layer or set of layers for editing. If you edit a layer without a mask, Photoshop creates one automatically, but it can be created manually as well. If you create a mask for a layer and then change your mind, you can use the Restore Layer Mask tool to change it back. You can also use the layer's mask to selectively remove an area of an image by setting it to pure white or pure black. For more information on layer masks, see Masks. * Frame and bounds. The Bounds and Frame commands enable you to create objects that represent the edges or frame for the image. Figure 1-3 shows the Bounds and Frame tools. To

Q: What is the relationship between JavaScript and JQuery? What is the relationship between JavaScript and JQuery? A: jQuery = JavaScript + Prototype As many others in the web, jQuery (JavaScript library) is just a subset of JavaScript. With JavaScript's power and capability as a programming language, they do use it as an object but more like JavaScript library, instead of its name being JavaScript Library, which it is in reality. With JavaScript, you will be able to use all the capabilities of JavaScript. Additionally, you will be able to use some of the benefits of Object-oriented programming features. jQuery is the most popular JavaScript library and is based on JavaScript Some examples: If you want to use functions like document.getElementsByTagName() in JavaScript, then you would use it as: $('x') Example: document.getElementsByTagName('input').value In jQuery, instead of using document.getElementsByTagName() (which is for DOM Level 0), it could be used as: $('#myInput').val() "$" stands for "jQuery", which helps us ease the use of JavaScript code and reduce typing. This in my opinion makes JavaScript development much easier.
